ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, In North Africa, July 12.—A steady stream of American, British and Canadian troops poured through a 100-mile gap blasted in Sicily's coastal defenses and plunged inland today after air and sea-borne shock units seized at least three key airdromes in the southeastern corner of the island stepping stone to Italy.

Occupation of the airdromes secured for the first time advanced bases from which Allied Air Forces can maintain a 24-hour fighter umbrella over the battlefield.

(The Algiers radio declared Allied divisional headquarters already had been established on Sicily.)

Tanks Are Used
(A Rome broadcast said the Allies had established artillery emplacements and had thrown tanks into the battle. Allied aircraft carriers off shore were said to be aiding in the maintenance of a powerful air umbrella over the ground troops.)

Stimson's Visit Hints Big Drive

Believe Secretary's Arrival In London Forerunner Of Major Attacks

CABINET MEMBER ARRIVES BY PLANE

By JOSEPH A. BORS
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Military observers today expressed belief that the visit to Britain by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson will result in further major blows against the Axis European stronghold.

Disclosure that the American secretary of War had arrived in London by plane less than 48 hours after the allied invasion of Sicily came as there seemed to be complete agreement that heavy attacks against the Axis were in prospect.

First Step
Further emphasis that the Sicilian invasion is the first step in the plans to release Europe from the Axis yoke was given by a war department spokesman in Washington.

Observers pointed out that President Roosevelt in a toast given at a banquet for Gen. Henri Giraud,

Blast Jap Ships Seeking To Aid Kiska Defenders

By EARL MARCKRES
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The Navy announced today that American bombers intercepted four Japanese cargo ships apparently heading for Kiska in the Aleutians and sank one, left another sinking and damaged the remaining two.

The action took place on July 10, 280 miles southwest of Holtz Bay, Attu Island.

The enemy formation was attacked by Army Liberator and Mitchell bombers and Navy Catalinas.

The following day, the Navy said that a light American warship again bombarded Japanese positions at Gertrude Cove, Kiska, and on Little Kiska Island, but the enemy did not return the fire.

The Navy also said that four additional Japanese soldiers had been captured on Attu Island, seized by the Yanks some time ago.

Slays Girl In Mistake For Other Woman

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., July 12.—Carrying a list of 10 persons he assertedly had marked for death, 19-year-old Robert Van Atta, a fugitive from the State Reformatory at St. Charles, Ill., was captured early today after he shot and killed a 20-year-old girl.

His victim, slain on a Mount Vernon street last night "by mistake," was Norma Bradford, one of the town's most popular girls.

Van Atta told Sheriff Glenn Murphy he had shot the girl in the belief she was his step-mother, Frances.

The sheriff said Van Atta had marked for death in little black book found in his possession all those he held responsible for sending him to the reformatory.

Second Week Of Nazi Offensive In Russia Opens

Fierce Tank Battles In Progress—Soviet Says Nazis Are Held

LARGE LOSSES ARE SUSTAINED BY NAZIS

By NATALIA RENE
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW, July 12.—The German summer offensive on the Kursk front roared into its second week today with counter-attacking Soviet forces on the northern wing in possession of two re-captured villages and all Nazi assaults checked by Russian defenders of southern positions.

Fury of the massive tank battle raging along the 165-mile front from Orel to Belgorod was indicated in the official Soviet announcement that 162 German tanks were knocked out of action yesterday, bringing the Nazis' losses for the week to 2,550 tanks. In equally violent air battles over the front, 31 more Axis planes were shot down for a seven-day total of 1,968 smashed enemy warplanes.

2,000 Nazis Wiped Out
In one sector of the Orel-Kursk front, 2,000 German troops were wiped out when the Russians smashed a furious German attack led by 400 tanks. Axis casualties on other fronts during the day were not listed, but on the basis of announced German losses, the week-end offensive has cost the invaders at least 44,000 killed.

Despite his terrific losses, Nazi Field Marshal Gen. Guenther Von Kluge's legions failed to achieve a major breakthrough. His only success in seven days of bitter fighting was establishment of a salient in Soviet defenses along the road from Belgorod to Kursk, but Soviet troops were declared to have checked all enemy attempts to widen the wedge.

(A London broadcast heard by CBS said the Germans had driven a 20-mile wedge into Soviet defenses north of Belgorod on the rail route

WHERE ALLIED INVADERS NOW BATTLE

Opening the "battle of Europe," American, British and Canadian troops have landed on the island of Sicily, just off the Italian mainland. Definite details of the invasion were withheld, but it is believed our forces landed on the southern coast. Axis broadcasts also reported landings near Trapani on the northwestern tip of the island. The Axis was said to be rushing reinforcements across the narrow Messina strait which separates island from Italy. Map shows island's distance from Africa and principal towns.

ALLIED INVASION FORCE ON WAY TO SICILY

Part of the great Allied invasion fleet of transports and landing barges is shown somewhere in the Mediterranean as it headed for the shores of Sicily. Not long after this photo was taken, British, American and Canadian troops aboard the vessels stormed ashore. At last reports, the operations were being carried out according to plan. This is a U. S. Army Corps radiophoto, one of the first to show the invasion underway.

Since that overseas movement has been successfully accomplished, the statement of fact just made sounds simple and easy of execution.

Syracuse And Other Key-Points In Sicily Taken

Capture Of Syracuse Provides Big Harbor To Land Weapons

TWO THOUSAND PRISONERS TAKEN

By RICHARD TREGASKIS
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, In North Africa, July 12.—Capture of the strategic southeast Sicilian city of Syracuse and numerous other key-points of Axis defense on the invaded island was announced officially today.

Ten cities and towns already have been seized by the Allies, and occupation of Syracuse gives them the big harbor necessary for landing the heaviest weapons.

Pivotal Point
Syracuse, itself an ancient battleground and pivotal point of the whole enemy coastal system between Catania and previously-occupied Cape Passero, fell to the Allied armies under cover of a terrific aerial bombardment which demoralized Axis ability to counter-attack.

Along with Syracuse, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower listed the following cities and towns seized by the Allies in a series of incredibly rapid advances:

Licata, a strategic south coastal town situated about midway along the southern reaches of the island. Pozzallo, a few miles west of the road and railway line to Ragusa, where heavy fighting has been reported.

Gela, site of an important Axis airfield 15 miles east of Licata.

Several other towns of varying importance, including Avola, also have been taken.

Prisoners Taken
Two thousand prisoners already have been captured in the successful operations placing Allied forces in firm control of the southeastern section of Sicily.

Other towns scooped up as the gigantic Allied army landed by sea and air in the greatest operation.

The ground is clean and looks enticing, no weeds are seen, between the rows, it rains a bit and very shortly the pesky weeds begin to grow. You hoe and dig and sweat and labor, to keep ahead but when you sleep, the pig weed and the old lambs' quarters, get busy and begin to creep. New Landings Occur In Sicily

Allied Forces Being Increased As Invasion Of Sicily Proceeds

KEY AIRDROMES TAKEN BY ALLIES

By RICHARD TREGASKIS
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA July 12.—Strategic areas of invaded Sicily were wrested from the hands of Axis defenders today by rapidly increasing American, British and Canadian forces landed upon the rocky island by sea and air.

A communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters dealt only with violent Allied air activity throughout yesterday in support of the liberating armies and disclosed that 45 enemy planes were shot down from dawn to dusk.

Situation Revealed

But reliable information reaching headquarters from official reports and correspondents who accompanied the amphibious task forces which blasted open the highroad to Europe gave this picture of the military situation:

1.—Allied troops are pouring through a 100-mile gap torn into Sicily's coastal defenses, meeting various degrees of resistance.

2.—At least three key airdromes in the southeastern corner of the island are now in Allied hands.

3.—The entire Cape Passero area is firmly held by Allied troops following a junction between British and Canadian forces at a point 55 miles from the Cape.

4.—New landing operations are in progress, including one reported by the Axis radio in the vicinity of Marsala on the Sicilian west coast. Allied divisional headquarters already have been established on the island, this broadcast said.

5.—Tanks as well as heavy mobile artillery have been landed to bolster the first large detachments dropped by parachute and brought in by silently swooping gliders in the hours of darkness.

There is every indication the Allied theater of operations is growing more extensive by the hour.

INVASION MOVE STUPENDOUS TASK

Mediterranean naval fleets took part or were in reserve battle positions.

The entire operation of the invasion of Sicily is a monument to the planning and command ability of General Dwight D. Eisenhower and his staff.

When it was decided to invade the island of Sicily, General Eisenhower issued an operations order prepared by his staff. This included the objective and the jumping off place. Also that all units and supplies would be in position on such and such a date and hour. Next the order would contain a completely detailed list of all the armed units to take part in the invasion, which means land, sea and air forces. It would also designate the units of the spearhead of attack and the duties of the different groups.

This operation order likewise gives every possible detail of the assault, and the arms and equipment to be used by each and every organization.

A copy of this order is given to the commanding officer of every unit involved. Each commanding officer then works out his own plans and requirements. This work is followed by a period of training and rehearsal for the final action.

The planning for the invasion of Sicily was without doubt the result of months of work. The execution of the assault is proof positive of the super ability of the supreme high command and their staffs of the United Nations.

ways and administration buildings. A large number of grounded Axis warplanes were smashed during the twin assaults, the hangars and administrative headquarters at Reggio were left blazing.

Two Axis planes that attempted to intercept the Liberators were shot down, and all the huge raiders returned safely to base, the communique said.

Royal Air Force light attack bombers meanwhile intercepted a force of Nazi Messerschmitt fighters southwest of Crete, and in the ensuing running dogfight, sent one of the German planes crashing into the sea.

JAP SUPPLY BARGES SUNK

on vital Japanese airdromes and troop installations during the day, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced.

Blast Jap Airdromes

Devastating attacks blasted Jap airdromes at Rabaul, New Britain; Kahili, in the Buin-Faisi sector of the northern Solomons; Vila, on Kolombangara Island across the Kula Gulf from New Georgia; Kupaung, on Timor; Babo, on Dutch Guinea; the Taberfane seaplane base in the Aru Islands; and Japanese troops and installations near the pivotal base of Munda, on New Georgia, and the Mubo area south of Salamaua.

Gen. MacArthur's communique indicated the enemy barges sunk in the Huon Gulf were attempting to supply hard-pressed Japanese troops near Salamaua, but made no mention of the progress of ground fighting in that sector besides revealing details of supporting aerial bombardments.

The communique also did not add to earlier reports of patrol clashes between American invasion columns and Japanese jungle troops near Munda, pivotal enemy base now completely isolated and in imminent danger of capture.

Yesterday's aerial operations, during which the Jap air force lost probably 12 planes destroyed and eight damaged, were believed to have ranked second in weight of explosives dropped in the western Pacific. The blistering assault which paved the way for the recent capture of observation hill, south of Salamaua, poured 106 tons of bombs on Japanese defenders, setting a record for concentrated bombardment unequalled in this war theater.

(A dispatch from U. S. naval headquarters in the south Pacific said American artillery batteries were reported to be pounding the Munda air base constantly. The land situation in New Georgia was described as "generally satisfactory" with the Japanese attempting to stem the American advance with daily aerial assaults. The attacks were believed to be inflicting only slight damage.

It is assumed," said the dispatch, "that the fall of Munda is a matter of a very short time as it is believed the enemy has no means of reinforcing his tottering position."

The half dozen injured troops were treated at the station hospital for gunshot wounds. Officers at the camp did not reveal how seriously wounded they were.

One other soldier was treated for cuts and bruises.

After the troops were dispersed by military police and sent to their respective barracks, an undetermined number of negro soldiers raided a supply building in their battalion area and armed themselves with rifles and ammunition.

Despite a vigilant patrol by extra forces of military police, the negro troops approached the area occupied by the white troops and began firing into the sector with the stolen weapons.

Colonel Zim E. Lawhon, post commander, made an unsuccessful effort to avoid the bloodshed by appealing to the men at the post exchange during the first altercation to "understand the serious consequences" involved in rioting.

Working in close support with ground troops, Soviet bombers Saturday night smashed at the Nazi-held Belgorod rail junction, inflicting heavy damage on a large concentration of German troops and supply trains sent to join the battle on the southern front.

The Soviet communique, reporting that all enemy attacks on both the northern and southern wings of the front were repulsed in yesterday's fighting, said the Germans on the northern sector "having failed to achieve success since the beginning of the offensive, once again tried to break through."

Paced by 400 tanks, a "large force" of Nazi infantry was hurled at Soviet lines in repeated, fruitless assaults. Towards evening, said the war bulletin, "the enemy was flung back to his starting positions, leaving numerous disabled and burned-out tanks on the battlefield."

BERLIN ADMITS SINKING

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Berlin radio today belatedly admitted Germany's guilt in the pre-war sinking of the American ship Robin Moor.

A broadcast heard by CBS said the 4599-ton vessel was sunk in the south Atlantic by a German submarine.

Before the war the German government refused to consider an American demand for compensation for damages resulting from the sinking.

TO REBUILD A GREAT FRENCH ARMY

IT'S NOT EASY to dissociate General Henri Honore Giraud's visit to Washington, on the invitation of President Roosevelt, from the tense political situation in French North Africa. But the general, as well as his hosts, has been working valiantly to stress the purely military aspects of his trip to America.

One legitimately military purpose of the visit was to arrange for the equipment of 300,000 French soldiers, and at a press conference he announced that these arrangements had been successfully concluded. He now has 75,000 men adequately armed. The larger force should be of great value in connection with General Eisenhower's plans for invasion of Europe.

General Giraud took pains to declare that the French would not lay down their arms after defeat of the Germans and Italians, but would then devote themselves to helping us overcome the Japs. France doubtless will seek to recover the Far Eastern portions of her empire. That consists principally of French Indo-China which, incidentally, was handed as a free gift to Japan by the Vichy traitors.

Giraud's avowed purpose to carry forward with President Roosevelt "co-operation based on mutual confidence," to bring the French war effort to its maximum, is a laudable one. It is to our own interest, as well as that of French liberation, to make a great fighting force out of the recreated French army. It is to our interest, too, that the French forces be unified. But perhaps that is obtruding into the banned field of politics!

NORMANDIE MAY SAIL AGAIN

No exact parallel to the capsizing of the former French liner Normandie at its pier in New York, following a fire on February 9, 1942, comes to mind. Fire-fighting water unevenly filling the vessel's hold was found to have been the cause. Presumably the disaster might have been averted if there had been some head work during the hours of excitement and crisis while the fire raged.

At any rate, headwork and determination appear to be headed for their innings now. Significant preparations indicate plans are under way to bring months of salvage operations to a conclusion by attempting to right this huge vessel some time around the middle of July.

Anyone who has seen the ship—one of the largest of her type in the world—lying on her side in the contracted space between two New York piers may have agreed with pessimistic opinions that the best way out of the mess would be to scrap the Leviathan and let it go at that.

A large force under Rear Admiral E. L. Cochrane of the Navy has been working night and day to set that opinion to naught. If the engineers, divers and specialists succeed, and they have been confident they will, the Normandie, renamed the Lafayette, may yet play a valuable part in this war as a troop transport.

TINKERING WITH VETO

With the idea of stimulating public thought on the subject, Representative Summers of Texas proposes a constitutional amendment providing that a mere majority in Congress be sufficient to override a presidential veto. At present a two-thirds vote of both branches is required.

The gentleman from Texas, who is chairman of the House Judiciary committee, argues that President Roosevelt has been altogether too free in his use of the veto power and that it's time to "get the executive branch of the government back on its side of the fence." His amendment, Mr. Summers argues, "would remove a hurtful confusion in the allocation of government power, which allocation is violative of the nature of representative government."

The veto power of the President did not get into the Constitution because of confusion in allocating power. As for representative government, the veto was put there in order to curb the excesses of congressional majorities. When it comes to keeping different branches of government on their own side of the fence, the veto was given the executive in order to enable him to defend himself against the encroachments of the legislature.

The veto is a qualified negative. More than one-third of each branch of Congress must concur in the President's objections to a bill, if the veto is to be sustained. If simple majorities were to override, the veto power would be as good as abolished. No larger veto would be required to override than was required for original passage.

"The injury which may possibly be done by defeating a few good laws will be amply compensated by the advantage of preventing a number of bad ones," wrote Alexander Hamilton in The Federalist papers, arguing for inclusion of the veto power in the Constitution. Hamilton went on "The propriety of the veto does not turn upon the supposition of super wisdom or virtue in the executive, but upon the supposition that the legislature will not be infallible; that the love of power may sometimes betray it into a disposition to encroach upon the rights of other members of the government; that a spirit of faction may sometimes pervert its deliberations; that impressions of the moment may sometimes hurry it into measures which itself, on mature deliberation, would condemn."

In short, as Hamilton said, the veto stands as a weapon to prevent "the passing of bad laws, through haste, inadvertence or design." The oftener a measure is brought under examination, the less danger there will be "of those errors which flow from want of due deliberation, or of those missteps which proceed from the contagion of some common passion or interest."

Alexander Hamilton is a distinguished witness against Representative Summers ill-advised attempt to wipe out an effective veto power. His irritation with a particular president brings Mr. Summers to argue for a change that would be dangerous for the future of sound, balanced, representative government.

It appears not to have occurred to Vice President Wallace that good will begins at home.

Secretary Ickes calculates the value of this country's natural resources at $12,000,000,000,000 which is fortunate if true.

One thing for the conservative young girl to ask herself when the trim young lieutenant proposes to her: "Will I love him in denim as well as I do in khaki?"

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

There was a guest for dinner. Little Danny, three, dragged his high chair to the table, saying, "I am going to sit by Mr. Hill." The mother answered, "I think you had better eat in the kitchen with Mary" (the maid).

The lad took his chair and placed it beside where he supposed Mr. Hill would sit and the mother went to the basement. On her return she took the boy bodily from the chair, commanding sternly, "You are going to eat in the kitchen." In one hand she dragged the chair and in the other Danny. Naturally the youngster was enraged, though he submitted. Danny spent a very unhappy dinner hour.

Mother's Error

I don't see why this child was not allowed to eat with the guest, but that is beside the point. Once his mother decided otherwise, her first grievous error was in not telling Danny long before he chose to pull his chair up to the table that he was to eat with Mary. Her next error was in expressing doubt by saying, "I think you had better eat with Mary." She should have said, "You will eat with Mary today."

Orson, 12 years old, has planned "to go down town" alone. When about to get his hat to leave, his mother told him, "I think you should put on your good trousers." Orson raised objection and there was an argument. The angry mother finally commanded, "Well, you must." The boy obeyed but with great resistance.

Since she was going to say, "You must," anyway, she should have implied he must in her first statement, then there would have been little if any resistance. Her trouble was she was not at first sure whether he should change the trousers or not.

When in Doubt

Sometimes, however, we parents, after making a decision against the child—and we have to make some for his good—conclude that we have made an error. In this event we should frankly admit the error and apologize to the child. Naturally we should exercise more caution before making a similar decision in the future.

But this is vastly different from letting a command go by default; for when we do, the child naturally supposes that his response alone caused us to change our mind, and that he had won. When we are in doubt, we either should delay the decision or announce to the child he might have his way. Whatever doubts we have we should keep in our mind and not put them in our voice or speech.

Looking At Life

By ERICH BRANDEIS

You have undoubtedly read the story of the four little brothers whose father is in the army and whose mother is a semi-invalid, unable to take care of them.

For weeks these lovable youngsters had been cared for by the New York Children's society. Then a newspaper reporter, attracted by their charm, printed a story about them and about their need for a home.

The other papers took up the story and almost three hundred offers came to the society from people who wanted to take them in.

Some time ago Mrs. Colin Kelly looked for an apartment for herself and her boy in Hollywood.

Wherever she went, it was the same old story: "No Children Wanted."

She didn't go around telling the world that she was the hero's wife, but a Los Angeles newspaper heard about her futile quest and printed the story.

The next day she had actually hundreds of offers, from landlords who were anxious to take her in. Human nature is a funny thing, isn't it? The more I study it the less I understand it.

Why did the same people who barred children from their houses become so very kind when they knew that the seeker was a national hero's wife and that there would be publicity for them?

These four little boys in New York needed that home just as badly before the papers printed the story. Yet none could be found until the front pages had it and then there was a swarm of offers.

I want to believe that human beings are fundamentally kind and human and charitable.

I want to keep on thinking that there is more good than evil in the world.

But sometimes I wonder. What is it that makes the human so vain, so glib to things that compare with the tinsel on the Christmas tree, the gaudy trappings of an amateur show?

Is it the realization that we are really very little people, very unimportant notes in this great universe?

Whenever I want to realize how ridiculous I can be I look at the pictures of Mussolini. Goering and King Victor Emanuel—mankinds with gold braid, swords, plumes and medals.

Maybe all this hangs together, maybe there is a little Mussolini in all of us—try to appear big when we are so small.

It's a puzzle to me—is it to you?

HINTS AND DINTS

Sun sets tonight 8:30. Sun rises tomorrow 5:41.

When Dad starts to brag about how much better his marks were than Junior's, just remind him that there were no radio serials to follow in those days.

An American sportsman, traveling in China, in the days before the war, was trying to express to a Chinese audience, his delight in being privileged to visit their city. He said, in Chamber-of-Commerce fashion: "I'm tickled to death to be here."

The interpreter did his best with it, but his hearers were left to wonder what strange creatures these American people were, when they heard the interpreter say: "He scratches himself until he dies to be with you."

JUVENILE LOGIC

"You children," remonstrated the uplifter, "would rather go to a moving picture show than to Sunday school?"

"Yes," answered the small girl honestly. "It's darker in the movie so we don't have to have our faces washed and a new dress on."

A flying rumor never has any trouble in making a landing.

AUDIENCE

An old farmer went to the movies for the first time. He watched the proceedings with interest, especially one scene in which a group of girls started to undress to go swimming. During this process a train passed by, and in the next scene the girls were shown in the water.

The old man had gone into the show early in the afternoon. Late that evening, an usher seeing him still in his seat, came up to him and asked why he stayed through so many performances.

"Well," drawled the old codger. "I figure that one of these times that train is going to be late."

A lot of people go through hell before they die.

Home is a blessed place where you can eat and leave without paying a dime to get your hat back.

The fellow who used to get rid of his worries by taking a nice long ride in the country, now has to walk it off. However, he's looking healthier, the exercise doing him a world of good.

"They say that paper can be used to keep a person warm."

"You're telling me. I once had a mortgage that kept me sweating for twenty years."

How did people ever express their meaning before they learned to say that everything from blondes to beefsteak has a low or high priority?

A noted beauty specialist claims that flitting causes wrinkles. And the little Girl Next Door thinks it's up to Grandma to start explaining—and fast.

About the worst thing people can be worried about is eating. It comes either from too much or too little eating.

Did you hear about the woman who said to her friend, "Let's walk home. I'm too tired to ride on the bus."

The story is told that Winston Churchill recently hailed a cab in West End and told the cabbie to drive him to B.B.C., where he was scheduled to make a speech to the world.

"Sorry, sir," said the driver, "you'll have to get yourself another cab. I can't go that far."

Mr. Churchill was somewhat surprised, and asked the cabbie why his field of operations was so limited.

"It hain't ordinarily, sir," apologized the driver, "but ye see, Mr. Churchill is broadcasting in an hour and I want to get 'ome to 'ear 'im."

Mr. Churchill was so well pleased that he pulled out a pound note and handed it to the driver, who took one quick look at it and said, "Hop in, sir. The'll with Mr. Churchill."

Question: When a bride has only a mother, is it proper for the mother to give her away?—Bride.

Answer: Yes, but the bride should walk up the aisle alone. During the part in the ceremony when the clergyman asks: "Who giveth this woman to be married?" the mother answers "I do." This she may say from her pew, if she so chooses, she may proceed, at this point in the ceremony, to the left and a little behind the bride, just as the latter's father would have done.

SENATOR GLEAN TELLS US:

To make it easy for the men in our armed services abroad and in training stations to vote on national as well as state and local elections, two United States Senators—Scott W. Lucas (D) of Illinois and Theo. F. Green (D) of Rhode Island—have proposed legislation that would authorize the War and Navy Departments to prepare facilities that will permit the use of V. —Mail for Balloting.

The legislation would require all commanding officers to give each man in their respective units an opportunity to vote—either by absentee ballots obtained from the 48 Secretaries of State or in case of men on duty outside the United States to write in their votes which would be transmitted by V. —Mail.

This is a measure that will meet with the unanimous approval of the men and women in uniform and by their families and friends back home. The only possible objection can come from politicians and from some labor leaders who know that the soldier vote will be a deciding factor against them.

It is well to remember that in the first World War, the men in the Armed Services did not have an opportunity to express their wishes and as a result the Prohibition amendment was made a law while they were away from home.

It is the solemn duty of the legislative branch of the government—the Senate and the Congress—to enact some satisfactory form of balloting by the men in uniform and to safeguard their ballots from being altered or tampered with after they have voted, and to expedite the balloting so there will be no delay in tabulating the results.

As a part of the legislation, the results of the election—State and National—should be made known to the men in uniform as quickly as possible. This is one of the FREEDOMS for which they are fighting.

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, July 12—The nation's capital is a freak city. It evolves the queerest suggestions and arguments. It is characterized by conditions that could not exist anywhere else in the country. It contradicts itself in every imaginable way.

Doubtless, its oddities are due largely to the fact that it has not any government of its own but is regulated locally by congress, which amuses itself, to a great extent, by prescribing rules for its own membership's entertainment, and changes them so fast that nobody knows, from day to day, just what they are.

The diplomatic corps is a complicated element, too. These foreign plenipotentiaries are numerous and conspicuous and their behavioristic ideas are imported into our capital by them from every conceivable out-of-the-way place on earth.

For instance, they are entirely out of sympathy with our automotive traffic requirements, paying no attention to our speed limitations, lights at street intersections or parking specifications. Seeing them disregard every safety precaution, we natives drivers to do likewise, with the result that Washington's thoroughfares notoriously are the most dangerous in the land, alike for

Hitler Probably Chewing A Rug

Successful Invasion Of Sicily Probably Has Hitler In Frenzy Over Allied Move

By PIERRE HUSS

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 12.—Despite the fact that the battle of Sicily is yet to come, Hitler is probably "chewing a rug" today as he is compelled to witness the successful Allied air-borne and sea invasion of Sicily.

That is more than he attempted against England after the 1940 abortive feelers and especially after the bloody price he paid in 1941 for Crete, where the flower of his parachute and glider forces were wiped out.

Hide it as he may from the public in Axis countries, the Allies demonstrated once again in Sicily that they are masters in organizing land, sea and air units for a clock-like invasion offensive. And this throws a prophetic light upon the European continent, separated from Sicily only by the Straits of Messina, the "trench only two miles wide."

Allied gliders, for example, slid down out of the misty night onto Sicilian targets without great losses. Parachutists followed without becoming clay pigeons for Axis marksmen, despite the numerous anti-aircraft guns, machine guns and searchlights.

Contrast To Crete

What a difference from the spine-chilling experience of Nazi gliders and parachutists in Crete! There the gliders met deadly fire in mid-air, and those which managed to land caught a hail of machine-gun bullets before the air-borne troops found shelter, while the Nazi parachutists in those days jumped from 2,000-foot altitudes and were open targets for British marksmen who shot them by the hundreds.

Hitler finally got Crete, but the price in blood was so great it broke Nazi hopes of a similar attempt against England.

A strikingly opposite picture was created by Friday night's air-borne invasion of Sicily. Towed into target zones at low altitude, the Allied glider pilots, undeterred by searchlights and flak, maneuvered their gliders into the most advantageous currents toward their targets. They discharged their loads with such rapidity that the air-borne troops were able to leave the gliders in good order and to storm forward to seize their objectives before the enemy garrisons could collect themselves for hold-out resistance.

Allied parachutists made low altitude jumps and, like the glider troops, were on the ground before Axis troops, in most cases, were able to spot them in the darkness. They dropped so rapidly and shed their parachutes so deftly that they attained their objectives without a fraction of the terrific casualties Hitler's jumpers incurred in Crete.

It is now clear that, while Hitler's air force suffered a great debacle in the air-borne invasion of Crete, the Allies have demonstrated this method as essentially practical—and this presages its employment inside Hitler's fortress Europe in the not distant future.

Bombers Hammer Sicily Defenses

Give Valiant Aid To Land Troops In Advance Into Sicily

(International News Service)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 12.—Violent air activity in support of allied operations in invaded Sicily was announced in a communique from the headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower today.

The statement said: "Enemy troop columns were heavily attacked yesterday in a day of intense fighter-bomber activity. Many vehicles were destroyed."

"Heavy bombers attacked focal points of communications at Catania and medium bombers carried out raids on airfields being used by the enemy. Fighters maintained patrols over our land forces."

"During the course of the day, 45 enemy aircraft were destroyed. From all these operations nine of our aircraft are missing."

CORRESPONDENT TELLS OF FLIGHT TO SICILY ON PARATROOP PLANE

squadron leader's ship. I watched the planes and their "trailers" climb to the desired altitude and saw the gliders cast off.

Behind us scores more of the U. S. troop carrier command's big transports brought American paratroopers to the opposite coast. We would be passing them on the return flight; it was a belt-line of invasion through the skies.

American Planes

Most of the planes were American with American crews, though there were a few R. A. F. aircraft mixed in. Paratroopers rode in the transports, weapons strapped to their sides and chuting with them. The British rode the gliders with English pilots.

Eager, laughing tomnies who couldn't wait to land on Mussolini's acres were the spearhead. And the American troop-carrier pilots, long bored with humdrum hauling jobs of warfare, were towing that spearhead in.

The German invasion of Crete was nothing like it. The Nazis poured troops indiscriminately upon that island with regard to losses. This was timed to the minute, perfectly planned, brilliantly executed. Of all the ships engaged in the pooled transport and striking force, only a very small percentage were missing that first night. Some of them may yet report.

Drift To Earth

Drifting noiselessly to earth, the glider boys rallied and went to work, theirs the job of seizing beachhead, striking the enemy from flank and rear, cutting communications and causing general consternation.

It was exactly 11:22 p. m. when I heard Maj. Leonard Barrow speak into the interplane phone: "Calling glider calling... are you ready? I repeat, are you ready? We are casting off." Then, before releasing the 300-foot towline, the major added: "And lots of luck, fellows."

I jumped on the navigator's table and looked out. For a moment the glider seemed to follow, then its wing dipped and it slipped toward Sicily—its cargo of British troops and reser. Americans were coming the same way a few miles off, "chuting in land."

Right and left it looked as if we were on top of Dante's inferno. The port was throwing up heavy, light and medium flak trying to clip the darting ships.

Start For Glider Boys

Then the "Helen B."—our plane—broke into the darkness as the pilot, Major Barrow, "poured on the coal," and one night's ride I'll never forget had passed the crisis. It passed for us, but it was only beginning for the glider boys. As we bore toward home, I wondered how they were doing down on that point of land.

Our acquaintance was only of four hours, but sometimes you can learn considerably in that time. They were standing by the glider of the Tunisian airfield, awaiting the takeoff, when we first met.

Everyone, pilots, glider crews, paratroopers and command were at that nervous pitch which invites tripe comparison. They snapped at one another, wrote long letters, went over and over equipment.

Other dandens were following now, and more rising out of that dust below. Once a towline broke and we saw the plane and glider go down again. The glider was damaged, its occupants unscratched and in 20 minutes the plane hooked up to a new one.

Lampedusa loomed first from the sea. It was sheer rock with nothing much visible at our distance.

Ack-Ack Flares

Closer to shore now, ack-ack flared continuously but the Fortresses were doing a job of it. The paratroopers reported light flak. Major Barrow moved closer to the shoreline, seeking the drop point.

Then came the port city and there was heavy ground fire from the environs with at fiery necklace of low tracers. Big stuff cracked higher up.

Flak isn't so terrifying until viewed from the perspective. There was lots of flak around the city. Low, and high and inside, as the baseball players say.

Machine guns fired from the beaches and two searchlights sought a plane. It escaped. The boys were showing their talents up there in those transports. Kids in their late teens and twenties flying like Billy Hell. They dove in and out and came through it.

Our ship bore around, having missed the exact spot by a little. This time the pilot completed a big horseshoe and then cut straight into land.

We were low enough to see the terrain. I looked and saw it resembled New Jersey's seashore flats. "They've gone," I heard Johnson say. "We're turning out."

Sure Of Perfect Landing

I tried to watch the glider's descent but a shell broke just then, our tossing wing obscuring my vision. They were sure of a perfect landing for there was no shooting directly below, only those guns to right and left. I could see no more of the glider.

Motors wide, we raged down the prescribed alley for home. Everyone now the job was done. Our trip wasn't yet over. Not with so many ships crowding the air.

Challenged off Malta, the co-pilot fired a flare and it fell short on the wing. There was an awful crash of metal and red fire spread all over the wing.

I had my chute on, the colonel grabbed to recover his. Then the fire went out, the plane remained steady. My hair felt damp again, as it had over the target.

Coming to the mainland the moon was down. It was a beautiful sight. Beautiful because were were home.

A few were missing, that was expected. They might yet turn up. The crewmen hung around, scanning the coast. How good the ground felt. The major knelt and kissed it. The night had been long—and full.

SYRACUSE AND OTHER KEY-POINTS IN SICILY TAKEN

ation of its kind in all history included Pachino, Scoglitti, Ispica, Rossoloni and Noto.

The communique announcing seizure of these ten municipalities fortified by the Axis to safeguard the continent of Europe itself from attack followed by a few moments an earlier statement describing violent Allied air attacks throughout the island in support of the ground operations which cost the enemy 45 planes.

Latest Statement

The latest statement said: "The task of disembarking troops and their equipment on all beaches of Sicily continues according to plan."

"Weather conditions have improved, and enemy interference from the air has been on a somewhat increased scale."

"Defended areas near the coastal town of Pozzallo, 12 miles west of Cape Corallo, and the railway line between Syracuse and Regusa were bombed last night by our destroyers."

"Surrender of Pozzallo was accepted by the commanding officer of a destroyer during the early afternoon of Sunday."

"Our ground forces continue to make progress. Seven enemy counter-attacks with tanks have been repulsed and at least 2,000 prisoners have been taken. It can now be stated the following major ports and towns have been captured by our forces:

"Syracuse, Licata, Pozzallo, Gela, Avola, Pachino, Scoglitti, Ispica, Rossoloni and Noto."

Divebombers Protection

Allied planes maintained a constant and systematic divebombling of Axis troops road concentrations and ripped up enemy rail lines to facilitate the task of invasion.

It was newly disclosed that the P51 Mustang, although primarily a fighter, has been equipped with dive-brackets, making it possible to adopt that speedy plane to all sorts of raiding uses.

Reports from returning pilots emphasized that landing of reinforcements continues without let-up. Capt. Jonathan Routs of Abilene, Tex., said that American craft are "as busy as waterbugs," constantly unloading men and material on the beaches.

(Editor's Note: A Reuter dispatch from Algiers said the first real clash between the first Axis reinforcements moving south. This message said a full-scale artillery exchange at some undisclosed point has been in progress since sunrise Sunday.

Pallon, Montgomery Command

Observers reporting on the battle situation all agreed that Sicilian natives were according a friendly reception to the invading troops. And enemy armed resistance has not yet reached major proportions.

Seven separate Axis counter-attacks with tanks were announced but only one of them, carried out in the Gela region, was believed to have been of an important nature.

Simultaneously with the communique announcing capture of the ten towns, an official statement from Malta disclosed that Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., is commanding American forces on Sicily, while Gen. Sir Bernard Law Montgomery of British Eighth army fame is in charge of British forces.

The Ferris wheel, at the Chicago World's Fair of 1893, contained more than 1,000 tons of steel, and its 70-ton axle was, at the time, the largest forging ever produced in the United States.

ALLIED TROOPS POUR THROUGH GAP, IN SICILY

seized after American airborne and sea-borne troops, joining forces in a skillfully calculated maneuver, advanced six to eight miles after repulsing an Italian tank-led counter-attack near Gela, northwest of Ragusa.

British and Canadian landing units meanwhile seized the important Pachino drome on Cape Passero, east of Ragusa, after linking up with British glider-borne units.

Battle For Ragusa

(An Algiers radio broadcast shortly before 8 a. m., this morning declared a bitter battle is raging for Ragusa, where Allied paratroopers were said to have landed. The vital southeastern base was reported defended by 30,000 German troops under Nazi Field Marshal Albert Kesselring. Telephone connections with the city have been severed, and "all operations still are going smoothly, according to plan," said the broadcast.)

(A later Algiers broadcast said "violent" battles are raging eight miles southeast of Gela.)

Rome broadcast said Allied units "seriously threatened" the southeastern port of Syracuse, having occupied points south and southeast of the city. Syracuse is north of the beachheads established by British troops on Cape Passero.)

Pachino May Fall

On the eastern flank, where British troops seized the Pachino airfield, it was not immediately known whether the city of Pachino, which has a normal population of 20,000, had been captured.

(The London Daily Express reported, in a North African headquarters dispatch, that British troops were in possession of the city.)

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of the operations, announced "good progress" was being made in all sectors some 40 hours after the greatest naval armada in history—some 2,000 ships—put Allied invasion forces ashore.

All landing units are in contact with Italian coastal defenders—so far no German troops have been met—and all "immediate objectives" have been seized, a headquarters communique disclosed.

Cape Passero Cut Off

The British and Canadian junction was revealed to have cut off the tip of Cape Passero, southeasternmost point on Sicily. Canadian forces landed on the southwestern coast of the cape, seized an Italian stronghold some 2,500 yards inland, smashed strong enemy artillery emplacements and cut the principal coastal railway linking Pozzallo with Syracuse.

Advancing a mile and a half, the tough Canadians met British units advancing southwestward after landing on the cape's northeastern coast. Before joining with the Canadians, the British troops pushed three miles inland, overpowering a series of strongly-defended heights enroute.

On the western flank, meanwhile, American invasion forces smashed through Italian trenches on the coast at Gela and effectively repulsed counter-attack by Italian tanks rushed from inland bases in a futile effort to repulse the Yank thrust. In the early hours of the operations, the Americans were reported to have met comparatively feeble resistance, which later was said to have stiffened considerably.

Main Defense Not Met

It was stated officially, however, that "the main body of enemy forces has not yet been met."

Great numbers of Italian soldiers were reported to have been taken prisoner, front advices revealed, and Allied casualties so far have been "slight."

An indication of the rapidity of the American advance was given in an American airman's report that they observed "heavy skirmishing" six to eight miles southeast of Gela.

Whether Gela itself had been occupied was not immediately known.

(The German radio admitted the Allies had landed at seven points in Sicily and established major beachheads near Gela, Licata, Cape Passero and south of Syracuse. An Italian broadcast gave a hint of the bitterness of the fighting when it said "violent battles" raged Sunday in which Italian soldiers "distinguished themselves in bayonet fighting.")

Allied troops were stated to have occupied some "localities," but the official communique did not identify either the localities or the two airdromes seized by the Americans. Front reports indicated one of the fields was in a coast district near Gela while the other was said to be farther inland, on Sicily's southwestern shoulder.

Official reports and front-line dispatches revealed that a good deal of the United Nations' forces initial success could be attributed to the skillful use of American and British parachute and glider troops dropped Friday night nearly four hours before the sea-borne units landed. The air task forces, assigned to seize key defense points and harass the enemy's rear, were declared officially to have "carried out their missions and established contact with Allied landing parties driving inland."

Alderman Green To Be Police Court Judge

Council Must Go To Harrisburg For Highway Conference On Local Streets

Alderman O. H. P. Green will conduct police court beginning Tuesday after the return from Harrisburg of city council. Acting Mayor Albert Hoyland stated today.

The council is going to Harrisburg to confer with State Highway Department Secretary John U. Shroyer in the hope the state will resume state highway continuations in the city.

Both Mayor Charles B. Mayne and Councilman J. D. Alexander are on a vacation. A council quorum must be present in Harrisburg, thus Alderman Green was appointed to act as city police court judge.

The first settlement in what is now Queensland, Australia, was made in 1824.

BREAKING OF LIGHTS, SABOTAGE

Reward Offers To Council; Round Offended; White Terms It Anarchy

City council today adopted a resolution presented by D. O. Davies, director of public safety, paying a reward of $100 to anyone causing the apprehension and conviction of any person or persons who breaks lights in The Narrows. He submitted the resolution after L. B. Round, vice president, Pennsylvania Power company, suggested that council turn out the lights there because lights have been replaced 150 times during a year.

He said it was impossible for the company to check the sabotage.

He said that it is difficult to get bulbs and the company felt it was licked. Round advised council to either do away with the lights there or do something that would prevent the sabotage.

Solicitor R. M. White remarked that this was an act of anarchy and advised council to offer a stiff reward and added: "Someone will watch for the anarchists and convictions will stop the practice."

"But, Colonel," stammered Pfc. Baker, "it's true, sir. I'm only twelve years old. You see, sir, I wanted to fight. I wanted more than anything else in the world to be a marine, and I hope, sir, that I can stay in."

A few days later, on June 11th, Baker again appeared before Coffenberg for discharge.

"Baker," said the Colonel gently, "I have here an honorable discharge, with character 'excellent.' I give it to you, not only with congratulations, but with a sincere feeling of regret. I hate to lose you, and were it possible, I wouldn't let you go. While you are only a boy in years, you have proven yourself a man. How you did it is beyond my comprehension. In my many years of service I have never seen a spirit such as yours. I'm proud that you were in my organization and when you reach the legal age for enlistment, I hope you will look me up and I'll move heaven and earth to get you back in my command."

McKeesport Gas Rationing Board Is Still Defiant

District Director Sticks To Assumption All Cars Get 15 Miles To Gallon

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, July 12.—The McKeesport gasoline panel of the rationing board was still on probation today and a new analysis of cases used as a basis for dismissing the board's chairman, Watson M. McKee, was to be made.
Permanent dismissal will be made by Williams on recommendation of his legal staff after this new investigation of the cases. In discussing grounds for possible dismissal, a member of the OPA's legal staff said: "A lot will depend on the type of violation."
As OPA officials in Pittsburgh yesterday authorized more gasoline for "C" holders who can prove they can't make 15 miles per gallon, District Director Alvin J. Williams ordered his gasoline panel to "abide by the conclusive presumption that all cars get 15 miles on a gallon of gasoline."
Williams' order left no alternative for the gasoline panel members although OPA specifically admitted to other boards that some motorists get less than 15 miles per gallon out of their cars and are entitled to extra allowance.

Health Talks

By DR. W. A. WOMER City Health Superintendent

COMBIEN One of the first words our soldiers in France learned to say was "Combién." It means "How Much." People often ask how much a child should eat.

This varies somewhat between different children. Boys usually need more than girls. Here is a pretty good working rule.
At one year of age eat 1000 calories a day. Increase by 125 calories at each year till age six.
Then increase by 200 calories till age twelve.
Then increase by 300 calories each year up to 5000 calories a day.
That would give a boy of six about 1600 a day. A 12 year old would get about 2800.
If his amount of nourishment is divided between meat, vegetables, enriched bread, butter, eggs, fruit and cereals, your boy should be well fed.
He should have curly hair, shiny eyes, good teeth, abundant energy and look like his Dad.

Schedule For Day Camp Is Announced

Busy Day Program Planned For Girl Scouts Attending Two Weeks Camping

"To give the parents a better idea of what the girls will do at Day Camp we are giving this resume of a day's program," says Mrs. J. B. Hurst of the Day Camp Committee. "Day Camp is self-governing through the elected patrol leaders, Court of Honor, and Camp Council."
The day's activities begin at 9:00 a. m. with the color ceremony. At 9:15 each group is settled in its chosen activity for the morning. These include: Nature lore, photography (if films are available), outdoor cooking, explorations, swimming, Dramatics, folk-dancing, life saving, sports, and games. At 12:00 noon comes lunch time, with each girl eating her own picnic lunch which will be supplemented by milk provided by the camp.
After lunch will be resting time with quiet games or nature study, followed at 2 p. m. by sports or special hobbies. At 2:45 the day's activities will be brought to a close with a camp good-night circle, the children leaving the park for home about 3:00 p. m.
The program is arranged to coordinate the camping program with the year-round work of the troops and to enrich each Girl Scout's life by practical application of the true scouting principles learned in their troops.

England Increases Guard On Raiders

(International News Service)
LONDON.—Three defensive innovations have been made on Britain's south and east coasts to combat the nuisance raiders who sweep across the Channel at all hours to disrupt military activity and harass war workers.
A high percentage of these sneak bombers never reach their objectives, something like 20 per cent of them never return to their bases—an extremely high proportion when it is considered that an average of only 4 or 5 per cent of Britain's heavy bombers are lost on big raids.
Hit Beach Raiders
The three new measures are designed chiefly against low-flying planes, coming in only a few feet above the waves to bomb coast towns and gun holiday-crowded beaches.
Until recently radio-location was relatively ineffective against planes flying below a certain height. A revised system has now been introduced, warning of planes—at any height—while they are still a few feet above the coastline.
New one-man anti-aircraft guns, specially designed to catch the zero-altitude raider, have been established along the coast, to a depth of several miles inland. This gun, most details of which are still secret, supplants in many cases the heavier ack-ack which is too slow for sneak bombers.
New Warning System
Third, a new system of air-raid warning has been instituted, giving populations an extra several minutes warning of approaching aircraft. Hitherto, first indication of nearby enemy planes had frequently been the sound of falling bombs. Coastal villagers now have plenty of time to reach shelter before the bombers arrive.
Main feature of the new gun is its rapid fire-power and simplicity of operation. Production facilities have made it possible to turn out thousands within a few weeks and the defenses are now well-manned.

Research Chemist Opens War On Rust

Structure Of Rust Coating Being Examined At Plant Laboratories
(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, July 12.—A research chemist has opened a new attack on an old enemy—rust, the silent enemy of vital war metal equipment.
Armed with a vacuum tube "machine gun" that shoots billions of electronic bullets a second, Dr. Earl A. Gulbransen of Westinghouse Laboratories, is investigating the structure of rust coatings that "grow" on steel, aluminum and copper.
While a rust coating is harmful, some oxide coatings protect the metal underneath them," Dr. Gulbransen explains. He uses his new weapon, an electronic diffraction camera, to test new theories as to how coatings are formed.
Electrons are shot down the three-foot vacuum tube and bounced off a highly polished button of aluminum steel on which an oxide coating is being built up. The electrons

Democrats Must Go To High Court On Redistricting

State Congressional Redistricting To Be Combated By Democrats

By WILLIAM THEIS
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Pennsylvania Democrats framing a court fight against the 1943 redistricting act which would oust five Democratic congressmen must carry their battle to the U. S. supreme court, Rep. Eberharter (D) Pa., held today in a brief submitted to Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence.

Eberharter's opinion, forwarded to Lawrence over the week-end, on the heels of a congressional conference in which the state chairman participated, found there has been no "similar case" decided in the federal courts.

"I recommend that the case, of necessity, be carried to the supreme court," said Eberharter. "The matter has never been decided by a higher court."

In Washington last week, Lawrence was uncertain what action might be taken in combatting the redistricting act passed by the Pennsylvania legislature under the Republican administration of Gov. Edward Martin.

"We'll have to wait until the next election comes along and then seek a mandamus to prohibit the election officials from certifying the election of a congressman or senator from those districts as constituted by the new act," Eberharter explained.

The congressman said that the "leading" case applying to the Pennsylvania situation found in preparation of his brief was a New York state case in which the state court upheld the New York legislature.

Weeks before congress began its summer recess, the Keystone state redistricting fight was the subject of a sharp floor debate in which Rep. McGraw (D), Pa., and Eberharter tangled with Rep. Ditter (R) Pa., chairman of the Republican national congressional committee.

"You cannot reapportion the number of a state's congressmen more than once in a decennial period," Eberharter concluded.

"If you cannot reapportion, then the legislature cannot redistrict."

PORT ALBERT, B. C.—A letter from home is like a message from heaven to Dave Hoy, and just about as expensive. His sister and brother live in Hays, China. He lives in Port Alberni. Dave received one letter two months after it was posted. The letter bore $12.40 worth of stamps.

City Police After Gamblers

Cruiser Policemen Showalter and Thompson raided an open air crap game at South Mill and Division streets and of the crowd which fled they arrested "Patsy Sylvester," who was fined $10. They also visited a place on Wabash avenue where gambling was under way and arrested Ted DeCarlo, Victor Conti and Phil Correll which netted the city $50 via forfeits.

Chief of Police Willis G. McMullen said today the police are determined to break up gambling in the streets and asserted that those who are spectators also will be placed under arrest. He says that some of those who shoot dice in the open do not have the decency to hide the fact and that every person arrested will be fined.

Potatoes Arrive For Institutions

"Potatoes are cheaper" is the way the old song Eddie Cantor made famous, started. That wasn't true a few weeks ago when potatoes were retailing at about $6.50 per bushel if you could get them.

There's been some changes made and a flood of potatoes are headed into the markets. Today a car load of potatoes was spotted on a railroad siding in New Castle for free distribution to charitable institutions.

The potatoes came to New Castle through the Agricultural Adjustment Administration of which Dorris L. Fulkman is the head here. The arrangements were made through the Food Distribution Administration.

The spuds will be given to the Jameson Memorial, New Castle and Ellwood City hospitals, the Margaret Henry Home, the Almira Home, the Salvation Army, the County Home, the Rescue Mission and any other institution that is conducted upon a charitable basis.

Enemy On Sicily Seen Biding Time For Swift Blow

Tregaskis Analyzes Light Resistance As Preparation For Counter-Attack

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the following dispatch Richard Tregaskis, noted war correspondent who witnessed the battle of Guadalcanal and author of the best-seller, "Guadalcanal Diary," compares the invasion of Sicily with American seizure of south Pacific islands.

By RICHARD TREGASKIS
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 12.—The light resistance encountered by Allied invasion forces on Sicily may mean the Axis is playing the same game the Japanese played on Guadalcanal—an attempt to lead us to extend our lines and then counter-attack at the weakest point, divide our forces and try to annihilate them separately.

It may be that the German forces, including tanks, are being held in reserve in the interior of the island, since only Italians have been encountered so far. This would indicate that the Germans are preparing for a mobile defense when they find out where the heaviest Allied force will be concentrated.

Had Time To Prepare
Since the enemy had plenty of time to prepare for the fully expected invasion, the counter-attack is likely to be swifter than the Japs' first major counter-blow on Guadalcanal.

The weakness of enemy aerial opposition to the Allied landings to date indicate that the Axis air forces in Sicily are small at present.

During the initial landings on New Georgia Island in the Solomons, far greater aerial resistance was encountered, in proportion to the size of the forces involved, than over Sicily. Also, our air losses—over the Japs'—were proportionately heavier during the first day of the New Georgia action than in the initial landings in Sicily.

Enemy Caught Short
The indications in Sicily are that the enemy was caught short of air power and was surprised not only by the suddenness and strength of the Allied attack but also by the choice of landing sites.

Nevertheless, there is good reason to believe that the hardest part of the land battle in Sicily will not begin until mobile enemy land forces in the interior strike.

But there is also reason for confidence in the final outcome. The Allied air superiority and the strength and initial successes of Allied landing forces are likely to prove the decisive factor of the Sicilian campaign.

Dugout canoes, lashed together and bearing a single platform, are used to ferry freight and supplies across West African rivers.

Roosevelt and Wilkie aren't the only two capable of doing the job, but the only capable men who could be elected.

SHORE DEFENSES QUICKLY SUBDUED

Sicilian Defenses In One Sector Crumple With Surprising Rapidity

By CLARK LEE
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ABOARD A UNITED STATES INFANTRY LANDING BARGE OFF THE SICILIAN COAST, July 12.—(8:10 a. m.)—(Delayed)—Benito Mussolini's shore defenses crumbled with surprising rapidity as American troops swarmed onto the southeastern coast of Sicily before dawn today.

The initial landings were carried out under cover of a magnificent and spectacular bombardment by our warships.

I watched the first landings of this American unit from the bridge of the flagship of the supporting naval fleet. Then I boarded one of the infantry landing boats.

The only opposition of any consequence was that put up by enemy dive bombers which spotted us after waves of our troops were already on the beach.

By the brilliant light of magnesium flares they dropped nine or ten half-ton bombs which missed their targets and so fell without doing any harm.

A few enemy shore batteries in the region of Siracusa attempted to duel with our cruisers and destroyers, but were quickly silenced.

Our troops ashore reported encountering only light machinegun fire.

America's most thoroughly trained army division now is in action against the Axis in Sicily.

For the time being its identity cannot be disclosed, but this elite unit has gone into battle without any "withdrawal plan" in case of reverses. One of its crack officers explained the meaning of this in these words:

New Development In Nassau Death Mystery Arises

Hearing Postponed As Sir Harry Oakes' Remains Are Returned For Autopsy

(International News Service)

NASSAU, Bahamas, July 12.—Alfred Demargny was arraigned for preliminary hearing before a magistrate today in connection with the mysterious death of his multi-millionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes.

The investigation was adjourned for a week the moment the case was called.

A new and sensational turn of events developed in the mystery yesterday when a plane carrying Sir Harry's body to Miami was recalled and the remains returned to the autopsy room of the Nassau hospital.

A coroner's hearing, which was held last week, after the American-born baronet's body was found in his Nassau home, reported that Sir Harry was bludgeoned to death. His body, it added, was found in a bed which had been partially burned before an electric fan extinguished the fire.

Marigny's who married Sir Harry's oldest daughter Nancy, 18, about a year ago, reportedly against her father's wishes, denied having been in the Oakes' home in the last year. However, American detectives summoned by the Duke of Windsor as governor of Nassau declared the residence was "full" of fingerprints allegedly corresponding to Marigny's.

The supreme court of the islands never has ruled on the admissibility of fingerprint evidence, authorities pointed out, although there have been two recent convictions in Nassau magistrate's court on the basis of such evidence.

Moose Lodge Has Big Initiation

Class Of 268 New Members Taken Into Order On Sunday Afternoon

New Castle lodge No. 51, Loyal Order of Moose, initiated a class of 268 new members into the order on Sunday afternoon, to bring their current membership to the 2,000 mark, making them one of the largest lodges in the entire Moose domain.

After the degree work had been put on by the New Castle degree team and drill team, under the direction of Governor George R. Gettings, the class was addressed by Al H. Ladner, Jr., general counsel of the order and past supreme governor, who delivered a stirring address on fraternalism.

Mr. Ladner lauded the work being done by New Castle lodge, which he stated had been well named, the "fastest growing lodge in Moose domain."

The class was represented by George Hicks, leader of the current class, who spoke briefly.

Special guests included Secretary Cliff Houlette of the Youngstown, O., lodge.

The current class was in honor of the 35th anniversary of New Castle lodge, and was also a tribute to the graduating class at Mooseheart.

Hold Government 'News' Is Largely Old, Repetitious

Newspaper Editors Protest Federal Agencies' Waste In Paper Shortage

By ARTHUR F. HERMANN
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The mushrooming practice of the federal government in issuing literally millions of press releases in the midst of a wartime paper shortage today drew the fire of newspaper editors who maintain that as high as 97 percent of the "news" received in the mail finds its way into the waste basket.

In most instances, editors maintain, press announcements from Washington and field offices are received hours and sometimes days after the news in the announcements have been reported by the press associations, or their own news representatives.

WPB Denies Waste
Officials in the war production board's printing and publishing division stoutly maintain that government consumption of paper is "just a drop in the bucket," but Donald M. Nelson, told a congressional committee that federal agencies would consume 421,000 tons of all kinds of paper during 1943.

The WPB has ordered a five percent cut in newspaper consumption by papers in the third quarter of 1943—the second cut since the outbreak of war—and publishers of books and magazines likewise have been instructed to reduce their consumption of paper.

Branded As "Censorship"
This latter order brought charges from the ranking Republican member of the House naval affairs committee, Rep. Maas, Minn., that the WPB was attempting to "censor" publications through limiting paper available for publications.

Maas declared that his publishers had notified him that a book he had written after a tour of the southwest Pacific battle area could not be published because of the lack of paper. The Minnesotan charged WPB with attempting to suppress his book because it was critical of the conduct of the war during the Solomons campaign.

Estimates Impossible
Estimates of the amount of paper used by the federal government in issuing press releases are impossible to obtain, because of the practice of issuing news both from Washington and from "field" offices throughout the United States.

In Washington alone, however, war agencies—exclusive of the Army, Navy, White House and Treasury and State Departments—issued 1,142 press releases during May. Each release averaged 2,000 copies, an OWI spokesman declared and they were run off to supply only news reporters and government agencies in the capital. Field offices, it was said, follow the practice of returning press releases off mimeograph machines for distribution to editors and other possibly interested persons in their areas.

A special House committee, headed by Rep. Boren (D) Okla., has authority to investigate the government use of paper in press releases, and has requested all federal agencies to submit reports on the quantities of paper consumed, with a view to sharply reducing the overall consumption.

City To Revert To Old Re-Patch Plan

City Proposes To Do Work, Charge Cost, If Proposed Bill Passes

During city council meeting held in the municipal building today Streets Director James Gibson introduced a bill which provides that the city will revert to its former way of repairing holes in streets. The city will repatch the excavations and charge the cost to the utility company.

Some months ago it was reported that before anyone or firm could repair an excavation he would have to secure a permit from the state highway department if the excavation was in a state maintained highway.

Should the measure be adopted, and it was indicated it will be, the party or firm may secure a permit either from the city or state highway department for the excavation and the city will do the work.

Police Warn All Amateur Posses

Because numerous posses of youthful age caused Graceland and Oak Park cemetery districts Sunday hope of apprehending the supposedly "half man, half beast" allegedly seen in that area by boys Friday night, city police today warned that any one caught trespassing in the cemeteries will be arrested. State, city and county police Saturday and Sunday combed the section in search of the ascribed "waddler"—but place little credence in it being a "half man, half beast."

Saturday, state police headed by Sergeant Quigley and city officers, led by Police Chief W. G. McMullen combed the district and last night city police took into custody half a dozen youths and several intrepid girls who went to the cemetery district hopeful of seeing or capturing the "waddler."

COMMISSIONER IS CALLED TO TESTIFY

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, July 12.—U. S. Commissioner Sydney E. Friedman of Harrisburg, whose accusations prompted an investigation of alleged irregularities in the civilian construction of the U. S. naval supply depot at nearby Mechanicsburg, has been asked to appear tomorrow before the federal grand jury again.

His testimony before the jury last December was followed by a presentment to Judge Albert L. Johnson stating the accusations "had no basis in fact." The panel, however, continued its investigations and later indicted 12 men on charges of theft, bribery and embezzlement.

Heavy Attacks On Axis Are Near

(International News Service)

LONDON, July 12.—"New surprising, very heavy attacks on the Axis," in the opinion of informed American sources in London, probably will result from U. S. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson's mission to Britain.

The surprise, these quarters said, probably will lie in the choice of the daring methods that will be employed in the establishment of a European bridgehead.

Stimson, it was revealed, will confer with American generals and other service commanders on subjects "too secret to be entrusted even to cipher cables."

According to law, Egypt's king must be a Moslem, son of Moslem parents, and a direct male line descendant of Mohammed Ali.

Yanks Land At Nassau Bay In 14-Foot Surf

Amphibious Force, Without Air Or Naval Support, Digs In Near Salamaua

(Editor's Note: Frank Robertson, 24-year-old International News Service staff correspondent, was the first war correspondent to reach the hazardous battleground at Nassau Bay, near Salamaua, New Guinea, where American amphibious troops today are relentlessly pressing back the Japanese invaders.)

(When Gen. Douglas MacArthur's bomber landed at the nearest airfield to the Japs in New Guinea 10 days ago, Robertson was waiting—not to interview MacArthur, but to ask a single question of his press relations officer: "I want to go to Nassau Bay—can I have your approval?" He got it.)

(He left for Nassau Bay by barge through the storm-tossed tropical seas seven minutes later. "I almost missed the boat," he later reported. His following story is the first eye-witness account of the little-known but hard-fought battle currently being waged at Nassau Bay.)

By FRANK ROBERTSON
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS ON THE SALAMAU FRONT, July 12.—Their small landing boats battered by a 14-foot surf, the American infantry and amphibious engineers performed a notable feat in landing and establishing a beachhead at Nassau Bay in the storm and darkness of the morning of June 30th.

This was the first wholly amphibious operation in the history of the southwest Pacific theater—perhaps the first anywhere, as it was made without either direct naval or air support.

Infantrymen—hardy products of America's rugged Northwest—were chosen to establish an Allied base on the shallow, sandy bay about 15 miles south of the strongly held Japanese base at Salamaua.

Storm Hinders Landing
A fleet of special landing craft, manned by skilled engineers, carried the infantry up the New Guinea coast through one of the most violent tropical storms recorded in New Guinea's turbulent history. Despite the roaring breakers, all the personnel managed to make shore without loss or injury.

With much of their equipment not yet landed because of the storm, the Americans were joined by Australians from the Mubo sector. They fought stubbornly against the Japanese established position with mortars, heavy machine guns and grenades.

Engineers, Boatmen Fight
The engineers were taken from the task of guarding and salvaging the wrecked barges and thrown into the fight. Expert boatmen with only an elementary knowledge of combat fought side by side with the infantry for three days and nights. Although some of his medical personnel was delayed and much of his equipment spoiled by water, Maj. Ben Meriwether of Nashville, N. C., had his portable hospital set up on the beach when the first casualties began pouring in.

The following day American positions were subjected to heavy bombing and strafing attacks, which continued every day after that. But the Allies slowly gained control, pushing the Japs back until, as this is written, they hold a beachhead extending several miles along the sand.

Live Underground
Here the Americans are living underground in holes, usually filled with water, and making full use of the lessons learned in the Buna campaign.

Unlike the fighting at Buna, Jap snipers are taking small toll of our forces and the doughboys have learned to stay quiet when their names are called from the jungle. The operation has proved that the use of amphibious forces is practical and might well be the blueprint for later large-scale offensives.

On Sunday, July 25, the Union will have a basket picnic at the All-American Beach, activities to get under way at three o'clock, with officers in charge of the outing, and Catherine Duff, chairman. Announcement has also been made that the retreat scheduled at Villa Maria, New Bedford, starting on August 19, to August 22, is filled, but there is still room for reservations for the second retreat starting August 22 to August 25. Sister Mary Florence of the Villa Marie convent is in charge.

A contest to name the Union Bulletin has closed, and the winning name, "The Sodalite," was submitted by Grace Cummings of St. Mary's parish, and she received the winning prize of a beautiful rosary. Prefect Frances Corio made the presentation.

Pictures were taken later of the Union, directors and officers in attendance. An original entertainment skit, entitled, "League of Nations," was presented by Sodalists of St. Vitus Sodality, Madeline Venditto, Gloria Cioffi and Marie Morrell. The skit was written by Gloria Cioffi, and Lena Mastrang, was the announcer.

Special guests attending in addition to member of the clergy were: Sister M. Martini, superintendent of the New Castle hospital; Sister M. Annette, Sister M. Edna, Sister M. Francis and Sister M. Axis Claims In Battle Of Sicily

Reports Fail To Coincide With Those Issued By Allied Headquarters

(International News Service)
ROME, July 12.—(By Official Italian Wireless)—Continued bitter fighting without pause in the battle of Sicily was reported today by the Italian high command in a bulletin claiming Italian warplanes "torpedoed three Allied cruisers, one minor naval unit and three cargo ships, two of 8,000 tons, which sank."

The bulletin asserted that "counter-attacking German and Italian troops" threw back Allied ground units "at several points and in one sector the enemy was forced to give ground." The communique added that Allied landing forces "vainly" attempted to widen the modest depth of coastal areas they have occupied.

(Allied sources have not reported any contact with German troops as yet.)

Further reporting on Italian and German air attacks on Allied shipping concentrations, the communique claimed a total of 40 merchant and transport vessels damaged and five Allied ships and several landing craft sent to the bottom.

Thirty-eight Allied planes were claimed to have been shot down in the last two days, against a lot of 12 Italian aircraft and 10 German planes.

An Allied cruiser was asserted to have exploded when torpedoed by an Italian submarine off the eastern coast of Sicily.

The debris is being explored for further evidence of the two deaths.

Turnpike To Be Extended

Extensions To Ohio State Line And Eastern Border Are Contemplated

PRELIMINARY PLANS BEING CONSIDERED

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, July 12.—Walter A. Jones, of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, indicated today that preliminary engineering surveys may soon be launched to select routes for the construction of approximately 140 miles of road to complete the super-highway between Ohio and New Jersey.

Pennsylvania will get its share of several million dollars for preliminary engineering from Congress, he declared. A 164-mile link in the proposed border-to-border express highway was constructed between Irwin, in Westmoreland county, and Middlesex, in Cumberland county, at a cost of more than $71,000,000 and opened to motorists in October, 1940.

Preliminary Work

Jones hinted he would confer with federal officials before Congress returns preparatory to initiating his campaign for funds. He emphasized that only preliminary work could be undertaken during the war because of the shortage of materials, but completion of the initial surveys would pave the way for an immediate construction program in the post-war era. Completion of the turnpike, he pointed out, would dovetail with Gov. Edward Martin's proposed $268,000,000 highway improvement program after the war to provide jobs for ex-servicemen as well as reconstruct damaged sections of the state's 40,500-mile highway system.

Jones, who anticipates a nationwide network of super-highways, declared the turnpike could not be considered completed until it stretched across Pennsylvania from border to border. Enabling legislation sanctioning the extensions was approved by the 1941 General Assembly.

Need Extensions

"I don't consider the job finished until extensions are made to the east and west," he declared. "I intend to stick until those extensions are completed."

Jones refused to discuss plans for financing the construction program, but indicated a substantial amount may be received from the federal government.

Simultaneously, Jones claimed "the turnpike is still paying" despite tire and gasoline rationing. The commission had received enough revenue up to the time the O.P.A. clamped restrictions on motorists to pay the interest on a $45,000,000 bond issue for the next three years, Jones said. Traffic, he added, had declined more than 30 per cent from pre-war levels.

FREEDOM, Pa., July 12.—Explosion of a 20,000-barrel oil tank which injured six persons Saturday night remains today without explanation, according to company officials. The flames raged for three hours as 12 local fire departments fought, successfully, to keep two other oil tanks from exploding.

Spank Braves Twice As Bums-Pics Split, Yankees Win 2 More

Pirates Blow Second Clash In Eighth; Phillies Downed Two Times

RED SOX WHIPPED TWICE BY BROWNS

By JOHN CASHMAN
(International News Service Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, July 12.—Now, as never before, the intricate inner workings of the first-place St. Louis Cardinals and the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers are revealed as two totally different mechanisms. While the St. Louis dynamo purrs along smoothly, with never a squeak or a groan, the Brooklyn machine crashes crazily through the baseball scene, nuts and bolts dropping en route, the drivers screaming bloody murder, and the rest of the crew in the back seat shrieking protests over the jostling.

Yesterday, these two outfits went their different ways, in different fashions. The St. Louis machine glided to a 5½-game lead with two victories over the Boston Braves while Brooklyn's Trolley rolled in the sixth inning when Bob Elliott's triple produced the winning rally. In the second game, the Dodgers triumphed, 5 to 4, with an eighth-inning rally in which they scored three runs.

While the Dodgers were clanking along, their brothers across the river, the New York Giants, were engaged in a home run feast with the Chicago Cubs. The Giants won the first contest, 4 to 3, and the Cubs the second, 4 to 3.

Phits Sink Twice
The Cincinnati Reds took both ends of a double-header from the Philadelphia Phillies, 7 to 4 and 14 to 2. Bucky Walters won his first game since May 26 in the opener while the Cincinnatians pounded the Phillies for 11 runs in the first three innings.

Moving over into the American league, the Detroit Tigers retained second place by splitting a double bill with the Philadelphia Athletics, dropping the first, 4 to 3, and winning the second, 9 to 0. The largest Detroit crowd of the season attended this twin bill—31,540.

Washington Senators lost the curtain-raiser to the Cleveland Indians in a two-run tenth inning rally, 5 to 1, then won the second, 6 to 4, on a two-run tenth inning rally. Milo Candini, who was trying for his eighth straight twirling win of the season in the opener, suffered his first defeat.

Yanks Keep Rolling
The New York Yankees strengthened their grip on the league lead with two triumphs over the Chicago White Sox, 9 to 0 and 8 to 6, although it took five Yankee pitchers to eke out the nightcap victory. Spud Chandler yielded only six hits in the first game, while his teammates pounded out 16 hits. The St. Louis Browns, who are reported to be pennant conscious, batted the Boston Red Sox around something fierce, winning two games 8 to 7 and 4 to 2. The first game went 12 innings and both teams collected 16 hits, but the Browns made one count in the last half of the 12th. In the nightcap, Potter allowing only five hits to clinch the victory.

A's Catcher Goes

FRANK HAYES, veteran catcher now with the St. Louis Browns, has reported for induction into the armed services. Hayes, 29, started with the Athletics 10 years ago. (International)

Foresees Glistening Future For Karver, State Track Flash

Boyerstown Will Be Great Miller, Conger, Penn Coach, Predicts

STATE COLLEGE, July 12.—Gerry Karver, Boyerstown, Pa., youth, will be one of the world's best milers a few years hence, in the opinion of Ray Conger, Penn State track coach.

Karver's career was temporarily halted this spring when Uncle Sam called him to the colors, but Conger fully expects the Penn State sophomore to resume his sensational running when the war is ended.

Ranks With Nurni
Conger, whose victory over Paavo Nurni was the first chucked up against the great Finn miler, firmly believes that the Boyerstown youth will someday rank with Nurni, Cunningham, Lovelock, Hahn, and Dadds. At Cleveland early this year, Karver was clocked at 4:14 in a brilliant field that embraced both Indiana's Mitchell and Boston's Dadds.

MOOSE-POTTERS TO PLAY TONIGHT

Hopping off to a four run lead in the first frame, the smooth sailing Lawrence Indies moved one victory away from the City Baseball league first half championship by whaling the Shenango Pottery, 8-1, yesterday on Mahoning field.

Staked to a big lead, "Monk" Rainey handled the mound situation like a child eating candy. Rainey limited the losers to eight hits while his mates bunched nine off J. Ostroski, Mrozek and Shaw.

Smack 5 Doubles
H. Koszela, Camera and Kendra sparked the winners' attack with two hits apiece. Ross and Budai rifled doubles for the last place Pottery.

Manager "Boss" Zidow, of the Indies, today disclosed that a checkup reveals that the south enders must face the Moose two more times. Another pair of clashes is scheduled with the Elders. In view of this, the Indies must win one more decision to grab the title.

Tonight, the Moose and Pottery battle on Lee avenue field starting at 6 o'clock. The Moose must cop to remain in the title fight.

Milo Candini Is No Houdini But He Mystified A. L. Batters

Seldom Wrong New York Yankees Muff Ball In Trading Right-Hander

(By Central Press)
The Yankees make few bad deals but, from the record, they made one when they traded Pitcher Milo Candini and Infielder Gerry Priddy to the Washington Nats for Pitcher Bill Zuber.

While Priddy has been a big help to the Nats in the infield defense, it has been the pitching of Candini which has helped the Washington Senators keep in the thick of the race for the American League pennant, and strangely enough, challenge the Yanks for the lead.

High School Star

Candini, who won seven in a row in the American, is the talk of the loop at present. The 26-year-old, six-foot right hander, was discovered while playing baseball in high school in California. The Yankee scout, Joe Devine, was impressed by his play and lined him up.

After a fling at American Legion baseball, Candini signed with the Akron, O., Yanks. He was bought from Kansas City, Yank farm, in 1941. With Kansas City, Candini won nine and lost seven.

Shipped To Newark
The Yanks then sent him to Newark, where he won four and lost seven games last season, hand-capped by a sore arm. Last January he came to the Nats in the Yank deal.

HAEGG SHATTERS TWO-MILE MARK

Leaves Dadds 95 Yards Behind As He Dashes Around In 8:53.9

(International News Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Gunder (The Wonder) Haegg was to arrive in San Francisco today to ready himself for a crack at the new mile record of 4:02.6, set by his Swedish countryman, Arne Anderson.

Haegg recently grunted news that Anderson had smashed the Haegg mile mark of 4:04.6 with a statement that he would attempt to break the new record in San Francisco because he heard "it is cool there."

In Los Angeles Saturday the speedy Swede established a new official world's record for the two-mile run when he ran the distance in 8:53.9, leaving his American rival, Gil Dadds, 95 yards behind in doing so.

The two are scheduled to race next Saturday at Kezar stadium.

Zivic Underdog In LaMotta Go

Fritzie Says He's Shooting For Kayo; Bout's Booked Tonight

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, July 12.—Jolting Jake LaMotta the New York windmill, rules a 7 to 5 favorite to whip Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburgh's pride, in their 15-round return bout at Forbes Field tonight, but Zivic blandly predicts a quick knockout victory for himself.

The former welterweight champ, who will give away 10 years to his 21-year-old rival and an equal number of pounds, isn't a bit upset about stepping a full 15 rounds on his aging underpinning.

Shoots For Kayo
"I'm shooting for a knockout, so don't worry about the 15 rounds business," Fritzie said. "Besides, LaMotta is made to order for me."

Tonight's battle is likely to develop into a regular donnybrook as a bitter enmity has arisen between the boys since LaMotta on a disputed 10-round decision here last month.

Zivic and practically the entire crowd thought the decision went his way; and this time about 15,000 fans are expected to turn out to see if Zivic can make his mastery over Jake official.

State's Baseball Season To Open On Next Friday

Colgate First Opponent; Coach Bedenk Ignores Player Shortage

(Special To The News)
STATE COLLEGE, Pa., July 12.—Coach Joe Bedenk has only two pitchers and a catcher with which to open the season, but he feels confident nevertheless that he will be able to field a representative team for Penn State's seven-game baseball schedule this summer.

The Lions open their summer-time season against Colgate, July 16, and in the meantime it is the veteran coach's job to find nine men who will uphold Penn State's diamond reputation against such formidable opposition as Colgate, Bucknell, the Navy Pre-Flight team from Sampson, N. Y., and Cornell.

Three Leftovers
His only players from last spring still in their civilian clothes are Mike Wardrop, Bear Gap, Pa., pitcher who will not be called to the service until September; Ed Holler, Rochester, Pa., catcher, and Matt McKinney, 128-pound hurler from Drexel Hill, Pa.

Bedenk's other performers will have to be found in the navy V-12 group and the new freshman class.

The schedule follows: Colgate, home, July 16 and 17; Bucknell, home, July 24; Navy Pre-Flight, Sampson, N. Y., July 30; Cornell, Ithaca, N. Y., July 31, and Colgate, Hamilton, N. Y., August 6 and 7.

Dodds-Haegg Mile Logical

Other Distances Not Suited To American Aces, Carver Avers

MATCH MAY BE HELD THIS MONTH

By LAWTON CARVER
(International News Service Sports Editor)
NEW YORK, July 12.—Gunder Haegg is a stranger among us and, moreover, has lent a hand to our war effort along the home front, so it is really a little difficult to put the finger on him. Still, it must be obvious to officials that if they want to put competition in his tour, they will have to toss the Swede in there against Gil Dadds, say, at a mile.

Gunder started by meeting Greg Rice at the equivalent of three miles, when two would have been more suited to the former Notre Damer. Then he meets Dadds at two miles, when the latter is really a miler.

Should Run Mile

Meanwhile, Dan Ferris, of the A. A. U., reportedly is working toward arranging a mile race between Haegg and Dadds at Boston this month. Whether the final answer is up to Haegg or to his advisors or to other officials I wouldn't know. But I think he should run our guy a mile, even though Haegg seems to have too much class.

One argument being used in an effort to get the mile race set, supposedly is based on his chance to re-break the mile record, which he held at 4:04.6 until Arne Anderson, another Swede, ran the distance in 4:02.6 only a few days ago.

They tell you that Anderson is not in the same class with Haegg as a runner, and that if Gunder the thunder puts his mind to it and gets the right conditions he is likely to shatter the record all over again.

Ready For Anything
Now the track people are ready for anything and some of them figure that in another couple of weeks with a few more races under his belt Haegg will be in top shape and all he will need to at least get close to four flat is a little competition. Dadds is the man who is banked upon to supply that spark.

In any case it is closer to a reality now than ever before, the way those Swedes go sliding along. And mind you, only 28 years ago the record was 4:12.6, a figure pared to 4:04.6 by Paavo Nurmi 20 years ago. And cut down by nearly eight seconds when Anderson bettered Haegg's mark recently.

Legion All-Stars Capture Another

The American Legion Junior All-Stars, the team chosen to represent Perry S. Gaston Post, in district competition, won another game at Mansfield Field, Sunday afternoon, defeating the Forest Cubs by a score of 4-2 in a hard-fought contest.

McCallion, on the mound for the All-Stars held his opponents to five hits, while his mates secured 10 off Vanessa, Fontialla and Vannassa, each had two hits for the losers, including a double apiece. R. Lubendoerfer, Caravella, and Waselewski, each had two apiece for the All-Stars.

Manager Vessella, of the All-Stars would like to book a practice game for the team on Thursday evening with some strong local team.

The score by innings: R H E
All-Stars 0 0 0 1 4 10 4
Forest Cubs 0 0 0 0 2 5 1
Batteries: All-Stars, McCallion and H. Lubendoerfer; Forest Cubs, Vannassa and Kelly.

Occupation, currently a winner on the Chicago tracks, beat Count Fleet two out of three times last year.

Among other things, he inquires about the sports scene at home and briefly tells about the surprise visit paid him by Lt. Vic Cabas....

Johnny writes: "Feel pretty good following malaria fever. I now play quite a lot of sports here. Our outfit had the first basketball team in Africa. We should have had since we were the first and 'roop in Africa. Right now I'm playing softball. Wish we had baseball here. We don't. Weather hot and we do lots of swimming. SQUADRON FLAG STIRS RIVALRY AMONG CADETS

Naval Men At Westminster, 113 Strong, Rewarded For Extra Efforts

(Special To The News)
NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., July 12.—Naval cadets at Westminster college are running a little faster over the obstacle course, playing a little harder at baseball, basketball, and soccer, and showing a little more enthusiasm toward the physical training program. And the cadets are giving out with this extra effort and spirit just for the honor of having their squadron pennant flying from the mast.

Under the supervision of Lt. W. A. Winnika, formerly of Chapel Hill and present physical director of the Navy cadets at Westminster, the men take their dose of physical training in a competitive manner.

Form Three Squadrons
Three squadrons have been formed from the 113 cadets, and they compete against one another in various sports every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evening. Lt. Winnika has charge of the Ranger squadron. Westminster's Athletic Director Grover C. Washburn directs the Lexingtons, and Physical Instructor John Eagleson takes care of the Saratogas.

Besides having their pennant flown from the mast, the squadron having the most points at the end of two weeks is awarded extra liberty. To safeguard against the "cream of the crop" remaining in the sports they excel, rules have been set up that forbid any one team to compete in any one sport more than four times. The unfortunate men who have more than three minutes to cover the stiff obstacle course must take extra training in this event.

Discusses Details
Details of the trip have not yet been worked out, but the idea originated at the war department. Louis, on furlough, came to Washington to discuss details of the trip.

The champ said that his trip will emphasize physical fitness and conditioning. However, he also hopes to help soldiers who are interested in making fighting a career.

Asked if he would do some fighting himself on the projected tour, Louis said with a grin: "Yes, that way I'll condition myself at the same time." He said that he would ask the war department to assign his peacetime sparring partner, now First Sgt. George Nichols, to the tour.

The champ stated that he does not know whether he will go back into the ring when the war is over. "That all depends—I guess it depends on how long the war lasts. So many people's careers depend on that."

BIG NAMES HEAD SHANTER TOURNEY

Nelson, Cooper, Mangrum, Sarazen And Walt Hagen Among Entries

(International News Service)
CHICAGO, July 12.—With initial firing in Chicago's rich Tam O'Shanter golf championships little more than a week off, it appeared today that every prominent club welder who hasn't traded his driver for a rifle will be on hand.

Byron Nelson, the former national open and P. G. A. champion and winner of two previous Tam O'Shanter, opens, headed a list of 42 professionals, 40 amateurs and five women stars whose entries have been posted.

Lots Prize Money
When the first drive sings from the No. 1 tee on July 19, those not listed as "improvements" will be shooting for $11,300 in prize money.

The "Tam" also will bring out Harold "Jug" McSpaden, Philadelphia's Harry Cooper, the perennial runner-up; Lloyd Mangrum, and virtually all the other big names" not in the armed services. Even the old masters, Gene Sarazen and Walter "The Hag" Hagen have announced intention of taking a whirl at the big stakes.

TRIED PRO RING
Steve Hannas, Allie Wolff and Billy Soose, all inter-collegiate champs as undergraduates, boxed professionally when they finished Penn State.

TOUGH TO GET
Neither of the major leagues has had a no-hit no-run game since Lon Warneke recorded one, August 30, 1941.

American Pilots Tell Of Attacks On Sicily By Troops

By CLINTON GREEN

(U. S. Staff Correspondent)
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 12.—American pilots back from Sicily said today that the Allies seemed to be doing all right.

A Texas air force captain said Gela apparently was under complete control of the Yanks. He saw many landing craft beached in Gela Bay with big boats standing by off shore.

A full-blooded Crow Indian flier declared Catania had taken a terrific beating. He said he could see invasion troops still pouring on to the beaches as warships shelled the invasion areas. Nine Lightning fighter planes attacked a column of enemy tanks, the pilot declared and left two in flames.

Torpedo-carrying Beaufighters caught two small merchantmen escorted by a destroyer off Cape Belavista, Sicily, left one sinking and set fire to the other, the fliers said. Another Beaufighter formation damaged a merchant vessel and a destroyer off the north coast of Sicily.

Fighters attacked and destroyed or badly damaged at least 40 Axis vehicles loaded with supplies in the Catania area, where the smoke from fires was visible for 140 miles, the pilots declared.

A sergeant, returning from an undisclosed bombing mission, said heavy Allied tanks already were well inland in Sicily.

Plan Showdown On Gas Situation

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, July 12.—Two congressional fuel committees—one representing the west and the other the east—today moved for a showdown on the gasoline and oil problem.

The senate western fuel committee planned to get a definite statement from Petroleum Administrator Tamm on his warnings of tighter gas and fuel rationing in the west.

A special congressional group investigating the eastern states fuel supply, meanwhile, disclosed that a conference will be held within a few days with President Roosevelt and heads of various government agencies.

At Y. W. Camp

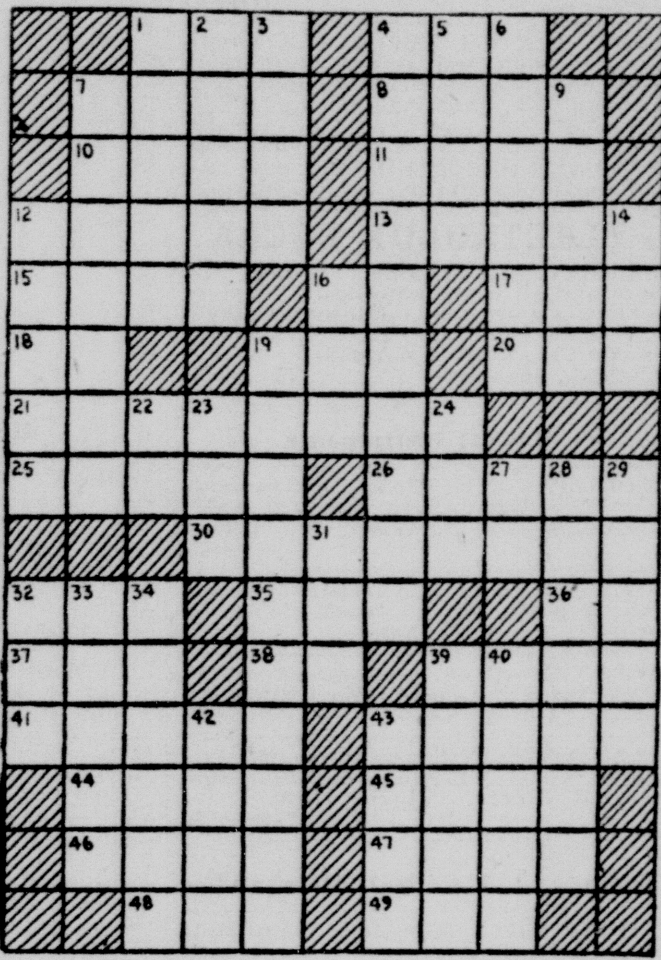

Regular classes started today at Camp East Brook, the Y. W. C. A. camp. Activities got under way this morning with a breakfast hike with Georgianna Truby and Nancy Rugh in charge. A hare and round chase is planned for this evening with Helen Hayes, the sports counselor in charge.

Britain Expects Record Harvest

(International News Service)
LONDON—This summer will see Britain's best harvest ever—if sufficient labor can be obtained before August for crop-picking—according to the ministry of agriculture.

Five hundred thousand extra harvesters are expected to turn out from towns and cities all over the country to help gather the nation's record yield. Thousands of troops, both British and Americans, will help in areas where they are stationed.

But, warns the ministry, troops may not be available for harvesting during the entire season. A call has been issued to schools, factories and city workers to lend a hand during vacations.

WMC Plan Reduces Labor Turnover For First Month Here

Area Director Alfred C. Scott Says Twelve Plants Report Lessening Separations

Alfred C. Scott, acting area director of the War Manpower Commission for Beaver and Lawrence counties, announced today that the stabilization plan, adopted in this area on April 19, is working effectively.

Scott stated that employers and workers in the area are cooperating with the WMC office and that already 12 of the larger employers have indicated their separation of workers have been reduced 27 per cent during the past month.

In the month prior to adoption of the plan, 5202 workers separated from these employers and in the month following adoption 3765 workers changed their jobs.

The turnover rate is still too high, but it is felt that as soon as all workers are aware they are not frozen to their jobs but may change jobs under limitations governing the movement of workers from one activity to another, the turnover rate will be lowered further.

Scott also announced that a section of the stabilization plan has been amended to provide that an essential worker may not be employed by an employer for work in other than essential activity unless the worker presents a statement of availability issued by his employer or by the United States Employment Service of the War Manpower Commission.

The amended section also provides that all employers who hire workers presenting statements of availability shall file and maintain such statements and shall permit inspection of them by the WMC representative.

TILL WINTER COMES

(International News Service) BAKER, Ore.—Winter and summer sports vie for interest in the Anthony Lakes recreation area near Baker, where sportsmen wade through snowfields to fish for trout in mid-summer. Fishermen caught "the limit" through four feet of ice, one mountain lake, while skiing was reported good above the 6,000-foot mark and skid-riders said they could ski four miles without encountering bare spots.

NEWS AND VIEWS AT CAPITAL

(International News Service) HARRISBURG, July 12—Gov. Edward Martin has unraveled the mystery surrounding the old-fashioned alarm clock that occupies the center of his desk. . . . He said the clock had been placed in a radio by mischievous students at the Mercersburg Academy prior to a speech. . . . The clock began to ring part way through the speech, the governor said, "probably, to remind me I had talked long enough." . . . The offending students, it was disclosed, had to walk 100 hours guard duty. . . . The governor said he was amused by the prank because he had used a chicken for a similar purpose when he attended college.

Newspaper bylines familiar to millions of Pennsylvanians have disappeared from the front pages for the duration of the war, according to the roster of the Pennsylvania Legislative Correspondents' association, an organization of newspapermen assigned to the state capital. . . . They include Lt. (sg) Everett Gerry, former Harrisburg bureau manager for International News Service; 2nd Lt. Carl Fittkau, of the United Press; Capt. Allen Christ, of the Associated Press; Pvt. David Abramson, of the United Press; Maj. Wilbur Halbert, of the Harrisburg Telegraph; Sgt. John Scotzin, of the Philadelphia Record; Lt. Bill Dennison, U. S. M. C., of the Harrisburg Patriot.

Governor Martin has revealed that the state government has difficulty hiring new employees to replace workers entering the armed forces or transferring to other jobs.

"We've had some trouble getting employees in some places," he stated, "particularly for technical and institutional staffs." . . . He added that work was not hampered because duties had been parceled among remaining employees. . . . At the same time, he said that "quite a few" state employees had availed themselves of an offer of a furlough while they worked in vital war industries. . . . Approximately 27,000 persons are employed by the state, according to the budget office.

The Pennsylvania Alcoholic Beverage Study, Inc., a non-profit organization, has reported that the nation's distillers had approximately 367,000,000 gallons of liquor in warehouses on April 1, 1943. . . . The State Liquor Control Board disclosed that April sales in Pennsylvania totaled 1,369,325 as compared with 1,550,971 during the same month in 1941. . . . The board's records show that April sales amounted to $9,308,000 as compared with $7,346,090 during April of the previous year. . . . Revenue increased despite the drop in gallonage sold because the federal government had placed a $2-a-gallon tax on spirits. . . . The board points out, however, that only 75 per cent of the stock is on hand to supply a 250 per cent increased demand. . . . Officials are expected to initiate a rationing system as soon as a plan can be decided upon.
